

March 2021 Projects

Fair Isle hats inspired from workshop by Terry Morris.

Top left: Mary Troy - Adapted with my own design - Grey and blue waves inspiration for sons swim team. Loved her workshop!!! Great fit and fun project.

Top right: Leslie

Bottom 2 rows: Donna Madeira – hats for her son and grandkids.

Terry Morris

Attached are some photos of the fair isle type hats, (and a sweater) I've knit in the past couple of years. Oh! and Socks! I love to knit fair isle patterning in socks so that I can use up some of my leftover sock yarns after knitting a "serious" pair. Way too many photos here, but wait! There's more! If I go back a few more years.

Lynn Elbert

I finished the corn silk/ cilantro bamboo scarf and started the sister with a different variegated weft. I'm working on the random looped rug using some donated needlepoint wool. It is taking forever! And I did a couple of paintings. Trying to learn Dutch pour. I like the colors but the edge of one got messed up so my DH is going to restretch it on bars a tiny bit smaller so as to rescue the piece. Isn't he clever?!

Carol Coffey
Crochet dollies.

Susan Kerhoulas

I carded both of these skeins. The top one i put some Suffolk on the carder then some mohair (from my goat Whiskey) then some merino silk blend and bling from Lofty Lou's. I repeated it a couple times and love it.

The second one is a combo of dog undercoat and Suffolk. It wasn't easy to card or spin but it came out ok.

Neena Lloyd

Snow flakes in March a special request for a friend also been learning mosaic crochet from YouTube crocheted samples then made charts off of them for the future it really appeals to the OCD in me ha !

Jan Marks

My projects this month were primarily weaving. The first a woven blanket for my soon to be born third grandchild, Hunter. I've always been fond of plaid and even though it was 3 colors, it wove much faster than the rug from last month. The second project was my attempt at a timed trial of a full size shawl for practice for sheep to shawl. The yarns both were won at a raffle at the Sacramento Guild. I also finally wove a set of towels (not pictured) from a kit I bought at Halcyon for their 50th anniversary, quite a while ago.

Joanie Soth

The white sweater is an old Vogue lace pattern, the pink one is just playing around with short rows for shaping and the teal one is a top down sweater.

Kathy Smith

More tea towels using kitchen utensils and bottles for stamping.

Top left: Linda Dean

I have been working through my "special yarn" stash. The yarn in this shawl was dyed at a natural dye workshop with the Guild about 10 years ago...at Charlotte Rhodes home. I finally put the rainbow together in this crocheted circular shawlette..

Top right: Merideth Masters

Fingerless gloves

I've made these for a friend who moved to Colorado so her hands could be warm while indoors

Bottom left: Beth Callahan

March Gnome

Bottom Right: Donna Madeira

This is Saw Tooth felted Bowl. It's only second time I've attempted knitting and felting. Yarn is Plymouth Galway Collage with different shades of green.